The Rough Wooings Mary Queen

The Rough Wooing was a war between Scotland and England. Following its break with the Roman Catholic Church, England attacked Scotland, partly to destroy the Auld Alliance and prevent Scotland being used as a springboard for future invasion by France, partly to weaken Scotland, and partly to force Scotland to agree to a marriage alliance between Mary, Queen of Scots, and the English heir apparent Edward, son of King Henry VIII,. An invasion of France was also contemplated. Henry declared war in
