As of February 2015, the narrows contained only four notable obstacles—minor chockstones and short pouroffs—all of which are easily descended. The best narrows—a flat, curvy section about midway through the half-mile stretch—appear smooth, winding, and colorful, not a far cry from the streaked walls of Antelope Canyon , the far more famous slot outside Page, Arizona.

Lake Powell is the 2nd largest man-made lake in the U.S., and a top-rated destination for boating, fishing, and sightseeing. One of the features that makes it so unique is the nearly 100 named side canyons where small streams, intermittent creeks, and tributaries feed water into the main channel of the lake.

Stair Canyon is an isolated place in an already sparsely-visited area. The area known collectively as North Wash—between Hanksville, UT and the upper reaches of Lake Powell—is often frequented by the canyoneering types with their ropes and belays and fancy footwork, but there is very little advertised in the way of non-technical day hikes. This is not for lack of options: dozens of canyons ...
